The screenshot displays the iNKY online resource interface. On the left, a feature story titled "Baby incentives unveiled" is shown with a large image of a woman holding a baby. Below the title, a sub-headline reads: "Hong Kong has a problem – we have too few babies. This will cause significant challenges down the line, so the government has rolled out a host of measures to lift birth rates. What are they, and will they work?". The main text of the article is visible, starting with "All major developed economies, Hong Kong has had low birth rates for years. In the 1970s, the birth rate was 12.5 per 1,000 live births, which is well below the replacement level of 2.1." On the right, there are two more feature stories: "Negative impact of declining birth rates" and "Boosting baby births". Each story has a small image and a brief summary. Below the stories, there are several multimedia links with QR codes, including "Policy Address – promote fertility and create a childbearing environment", "Why don't more people have babies?", "iNKY instant exercise", and "Listening comprehension".

Instant online exercise

Multiple-choice questions that test readers' understanding of the cover and feature stories.

Listening Comprehension

Students practise listening skills for the HKDSE exam by listening to a summary of the feature story and then answer some questions to test their understanding. (Will be provided in the first issue of each month.)
